About Alexandra van Loon

A lawyer at AKD, Alexandra van Loon specialises in dispute resolution, avoiding and resolving commercial disputes. With her expertise, she likes to focus on complex disputes and matters involving recourse, security and insolvency, and related liability issues.

Her clients include trustees in large-scale as well as low-key bankruptcies, whom she advises on any problem facing them while they administer and liquidate bankrupt estates. Such problems cover a wide area: actio pauliana (annulment of legal acts prejudicing creditors), liability of directors, auditors and others, commercial and personal security, reservation of title, verification disputes, and more.

Alexandra advised and assisted the trustees in the cross-border bankruptcies of DBS Bank, Lehman Brothers and Royal Imtech.

National and international enterprises also come to Alexandra if they need advice when contracting parties default on their obligations, are in distress, financially or otherwise, or have in fact been adjudicated bankrupt. She will then help them seek recourse, attachments and foreclosure, collect security, annul prejudicial legal acts, determine D&O liability and settle disputes with trustees.

Starting from the will to avoid disputes or in fact find an enduring solution, Alexandra will provide strategic advice and conduct delicate negotiations. If legal action is inevitable, she will happily litigate for her clients.

Having a corporate background, Alexandra as a rule takes all commercial interests into consideration and uses clear, natural language to explain complex legal issues.

Clients describe Alexandra as a passionate, structured and result-driven lawyer, appreciating her for her engagement, clear communication and accessibility.

She regularly lectures and publishes articles or annotations on a range of legal issues, including recourse, security and insolvency.
